GALLOWS AND THE GOSPEL.

WERE ALL READY FOR MR. WILCOX

But a Strong Popular Sentiment Saved His Life-Divisions Between the Senate and the House-

Conflicting Interests.

Washington, April 10 .- [Staff Correspondence of THE BEE. - There are few more familiar faces here in Washington than Mr. Celso Cæsar Moreno, a distinguished Italian soldier, and whilem minister of state for Hawaii. For many years Mr. Moreno was King Kalakua's most trusted and intimate friend, but some years ago there was a revolt which resulted in the overthrow of the Moreno rule and the subsequent hasty departure of Mr. Moreno. He has never quite given up the hope of getting back to Hawali, and while here is incidentally trying to collect $45,000 which he claims the government owes him.

Several little revolutions in which he has had more or less interest have failed, and up to today the missionaries, who were sent there to Christianize the people, but are now running the politics of the place, have kept on top. They are in supreme control, and it is against them that Mr. Moreno's efforts are primarily directed.

Mr. Moreno is in constant communication with his friends in Hawaii. At the head of the opposition is Robert Wilcox, a native Hawalian, who has been thoroughly educated abroad. One of Mr. Wilcox's first acts when he returned home some six months ago was to start up an armed revolution against the missionary rule, but the Christian missionaries whipped him, and he had an exceedingly close call for his life. He was condemned to death, but public sentiment proved too strong, and while the missionaries sentiment. The gallows were taken down, and Mr. Wilcox will go to the legislature, there to make life a burden to the ministry. There have been some interesting letters assing between Wilcox, who is now in Hawaii, and Moreno, who is still here in Wash ington. These extracts from the last one sent by Moreno to Wilcox are the most interesting, because they contain the entire pro-

without reserve make a motion of want of confidence in the present missionary ministry, followed by another for impeachment of the ministers, Chiefs of Justice Judd and Rev Carter minister of Hawaii to Washing ton for having betrayed the confidence of the Hawaiian king and people in framing and proposing a treaty in 1889 to the American govrument for the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands to the United States.

"Minister A. P. Carter is the public laughing stock in Washington, and his principal aim in the above-mentioned treaty of annexa-tion, was to become himself and his brotherin-law, Judd. both senators to the United States senate in Washington from the state of Hawaii, and he (Carter) and his missionary wife have been for several years boasting of it.
"I have good reasons to believe that President Harrison and Secretary of State Blains not only did not give any encouragement to Minister Carter in his annexation scheme against the will of the Hawaiian kine and his people, but they and their party will prevent any other nation, as it was done in Samoa, to take possession of its Hawaiian islands. Therefore the Hawaiian independence and neutrality are assured for the present, ich against the will of the missionary ring

The letter concludes with some recommendations as to the other members of the cabi-net and are directed simply to compass a peaceful overthrow of the PRESENT MISSIONARY MENTSTRY by the perfectly legitimate means; that of a vote of "lack of confidence" it cannot, of course, interfere. But if it should ever occur to Mr. Moreno or his friends to organize an armed force, or in any way—form—plans look-ing to the disturbance of the peace of Hawaii, the department will interfere in the most de cisive manner. Meantime it will be of interest to wait for the proceedings of the next session of the Hawaiian parliament.

With singular and significant regularity it has been the custom of the two houses of congress to divide upon important issues—that is, the senate is far away from the position of the house, and vice versa. If the house decides to appropriate a certain sum of money for a stipulated purpose the senate is dead sure to fix another amount. If the senate concludes to declare a forfeiture of a certain number of acres of railroad land, the house with strict regularity fixes the figures differ-ently. If the house provides for the construc-tion of a certain number of warships or cruisers, the senate is sure to decide that the number shall be different. When the senate the other day passed the dependent pension bill fixing the pensions at $12 a month, the house said it should be $8. When the house committee adopted a food adulteration bill, the senate committee reported a measure of general character. When the senate committee on Indian affairs made certain stipula-tions by which tribes of Indians were to yield up their reservations for public settlement, the house committee fixed different terms, and terms very materially different. So it goes. The two houses come together and make an agreement only after negotiations and many sacrifices. The scante generally has its own way, however. WHAT DOES THIS ALL MEAN! This question has been turned over and over again many times in the minds of states men, logicians and business men in Washing-ton who have had an opportunity to see the combative conflicting workings of the two houses of congress. The conclusion is that one body is elected by the people direct, while the other body is elected by delogated power. The members of the house have to account directly to their constituents for action or inaction, while the senators are ac-countable to members of legislatures are countable to members of legislatures, men who are more or less politicians.

The fact that there is a great and material difference between the individual and col-lective actions of members of the two houses has done more to bring about the belief here that the senators should be elected by the direct vote of the people than anything else. A senator is a much more independent person-age than a member of the house. It does not necessarily follow that he exercises any more influence than a member of the house. It is true that the senate is a more dignified body, and a senator a more dignified person; but this grows out of the fact that one is a direct representative of the people and member of a body of 330, while the other is a delegated representative of the people, accountable to another legislative body, composed more or less of politicians; and also because he is a member of a body proposition to amend the constitution so as to provide for the election of senators by a direct vote of the people. That is the senate itself. The senators will not submit themselves to the will of the people.

Probably never in the history of the gov ernment were there so many conflicting inter ests before congress as now. There is scarcely a general subject pending which has not two strong sides and two formidable factions fighting for and against it. A mem ber of congress is nowedays CONSTANTLY BETWEEN TWO FIRES.

He is sure to be cursed if he supports a measure and damned if he does not. It is not the farming interests against the city and cor-poration interests alone that bring about these conflicts. The farmers are divided up when they attempt to stand for or against a measure, and there is scarcely a ward in any city of the United States where a great maority favor or oppose a measure of general interest. Prominent men in congress representing all parties are wondering what this all means. Most of them conclude it is the outcropping of a stringent money market and a glut in the markets for farm ducts; conflicting interests and divisions among laborers; the split on the tariff and internal revenue and a general contention over olitical economy. The circumstances all con-idered it will be a wonder if the work of this congress will please the majority of the peo-ple, for there is scarcely a state delegation that stand together. Even the two senators from many states separate on questions, one yoting for and the other against a measure. This is an "off period," and surprises of election are no more unusual than surprises in congress. It seems to be a period when everybody is "going it apon his own hook

SHE PREDICTS A TIDAL WAVE. The City to Be Wiped Out of Existence

-Career of a Fast Young Man-A Noted Abolitionist Dead.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 8 .- [Special to THE BEE. |-California, and especially San Francisco, has always been a fruitful field for lunatics. During the palmy days of speculation on the stock exchange, where fortunes were made and lost in an hour, the number of newly made maniaes and suicides was appalling. Jumping from ferry boats was the fad for quite a while, and got to be

Mrs. Woodworth's prediction of the de struction of San Francisco by a tidal wave is now turning soft heads.

Johann Christian Hennel, a German about 30 years of age, has followed the occupation of a bartender since his arrival in this country about two years ago. He has followed the ideas of Mrs. Woodworth, the spiritual ist, and is now a maniac. The malady has shown itself only since the prediction made by the prophetess that the city of San Francisco would be washed away by a tidal wave on the 14th inst., and lately the young man has been in a seriously demented state.

has been in a scriously demented state. Tes-terday he became violent.

Officers were summoned to his boarding-house, 577 Minna street yesterday morning and removed him to the new city hall station. During the afternoon he was examined by the board of insanity commissioners and John J. Crooks has applied to the probate court to be appointed guardian of his brother, Robert L. Crooks, whom he alleges to be incompetent to care for his estate. He sets forth in his petition that Robert Lee Crooks owns valuable real estate in several counties of the state, but that, owing to his passion for gam oling, and the use of intoxicating liquors, necessary for some sensible person to take charge of the property.

The members of the family are all well known in this city. The father, Matthew Crooks, died about ten years ago, and at that time his estate was appraised at $616,194.80. He bequeathed his entire property to his widow, to be held in 4rust for his children, and provided that it should not be distributed in the volume of the provided that it should not be distributed in the volume of the provided that it should not be distributed in the volume of the provided that it should not be distributed in the volume of the provided that it should not be distributed in the volume of the provided that it should not be distributed in the provided that it should not be distributed in the provided that it should not be distributed in the provided that it should not be distributed in the provided that it is not be distributed in the provided that the provided that it is not be distributed in the provided that the provided that it is not be distributed in the provided that the provided that it is not be distributed in the provided that tributed until the voltagest child, Robert Lee Crooks, should come of sage. John A. Collins, a Pacific coast pioneer and a national character, died in this city on Thursday. His career was marked by inci-dents of unusual interest. Born in Vermont

In July, 1889, Aaron J. Mullin obtained a position as chief solicitor for the Masonic Mutual Aid association of the Pacific coast. With him was a woman whom he introduced as his wife. Their conduct aroused the susas his wife. Their conduct aroused the sus-picions of the directors of the association, who called for an explanation. It was then found that he had a wife in Montevideo, Minn., and that this woman was Kate H. Smith of Omaha, Neb. As a result of a spirited talk between the directors and Mullin, Kate was sent away. Before this a policy was issued in favor of Mrs. Elizabeth J. Mullin of Montevideo, Minn.

Mullin then went on the road and consorted with the Smith woman again in Omaha, and she traveled with him. At Reno, Nev., she induced him to revoke his former beneficiary and substitute her name. He did so, but and substitute her name. He did so, but failed to properly fill out the certificate. In the mean time, in September, his wife ob-tained a divorce from Mullin, and, the Smith Woman claims, he then married her. There is a doubt of this marrsage. Mullin died in Omaha on October 30. Ludden. pastor of the English Lutheran church, show cause why he should not be attached for contempt of court for disobeying the order restraining him from interfering with or disposing of the house situated on the corner of Fourteenth and M streets. Back of this is an interesting case. Some years ago St Mark's Lutheran church was in need of funds to build a new church and secured $1,950 from the board of church extension. also traded their property on Teath and H streets for lots at Fourteenth and M. In ortler to avoid asking license from the court they deeded the property to the pastor, Rev. L. Lipe. When he left here instead of deed ing it to the man designated by the church he gave a deed to the church board of extension. This board sent out Rev. Ludden to organize a new church, disregarding Mark's congregation altogether, which Ludden is now engaged in doing. He has had plans and specifications prepared for a new structure at Fourteenth and M streets, and when this came to the ears of St. Mark's they got out an injunction a week ago re-straining him from disposing of or selling the house now situated thereon. The pre-had disposed of the house several days b the restraining order was issued, and about midnight Wednesday night the man who bought it started to move it out into the street. TWO PAVING DECISIONS.

Judge Chapman this afternoon decided two very important cases involving the same principle. Messrs, Lumnster and Lansing were the plaintiffs and the city of Lincoln the defendant. The plaintiffs sought to enjoin the collection of paying assessments on the ground that they should not be required o pay for paying on a side street upon which their property did not abut; that said paving did not enhance—their property's value and was not a special benefit. The court held that the assessment made by the council was fair and equitable; that the paving of streets on which 'property did not abut specially benefitted all property in that block, and that it drew trade to that vicinity and thereby enhanced the value of contiguous property.
